$Ka-Ching! Design your way to extra cash!

Break into the fashion business—no sewing required! It’s easy, thanks to sites like Spreadshirt, Zazzle and CafePress that let you upload your own designs for tees and tanks, hoodies, pajamas and more, then sell them online! Here’s how to get started:

- OPEN UP SHOP! Start-up is easy—and free! Simply visit Spreadshirt.com and click on “Open Your Own Online Shop,” click “Create Your Own” on Zazzle.com, or “Design Your Own” on CafePress.com. The sites take care of manufacturing and shipping goods to customers—and you get a cut of the profit every time someone buys an item you designed! Whichever platform you choose, you’ll be guided through the steps to creating your designs.

- TECH ASSISTANCE AVAILABLE to walk you through the process. In some cases, you can even e-mail your file, and they’ll convert it into a printable template for you.

- PRICE IT RIGHT! The websites set a base price for each product, which is the amount they’ll earn for each sale. The retail price is set by you—and you get to keep the difference between the two! So, say, a T-shirt has a base price of $14.95 and you set the retail price of $19.95, you take in $5 for every one sold! How high should you go? It’s best to check out the competition to see what comparable styles are going for. In general, the more intricate your design, the more you can charge.

- REV PROFITS LIKE A PRO! Tapping into trends will help you score more sales—and a bigger profit. “Quotes, funny sayings and gym references are always popular,” says Angela Ryan, strategic marketing manager at Spreadshirt. Also smart: finding a niche that helps you corner a specific market. For example, you could take a geographical focus, with designs that highlight sports, cuisines, dialects and sayings of a particular region or town. And to pump up sales even more, create dedicated social media pages for your shop on Facebook, Pinterest and Instagram, and show off pics of people wearing your fashions.
